

Meet Ben Leslie

Consultant Clinical Neuropsychologist

ABOUT BEN

Ben is a Clinical Neuropsychologist who helps people and the teams around them understand how conditions affecting the brain can influence thinking, concentration, learning, memory, language and everyday functioning.

A Melbourne local, Ben spent several years working in Sydney's public health system before returning home in 2024. He has worked in hospital, community, rehabilitation and forensic settings, and continues to work part time in public health. He has particular expertise in mental illness and neurological conditions.

Ben believes that understanding the person is just as important as understanding the conditions they live with, and takes a friendly, down-to-earth approach from the first appointment through to feedback.

☆ Fun fact

Whilst living in Sydney, Ben went for a walk to buy a bottle of olive oil. Instead, he came home with a stray kitten. Olive loves his new home in Melbourne!
